The first European Sustainable Development Week (ESDW) takes place from 30th May - 5th June 2015. This European-wide initiative, supported by the European Sustainable Development Network, has the aim of stimulating and making visible activities, projects and events that promote sustainable development.

These will be able to be registered and viewed on the ESDW website (www.esdw.eu). This will be a tool for organizers to promote their project and attract higher participation. Furthermore, they will gain access to promotion material (logos, posters, banners etc.) on the site, highlighting their participation in a concerted European effort for sustainable development. The ESDW will act as an umbrella for existing national sustainable development weeks in France, Germany and Austria and motivates new initiatives, activities and events in EU Member States and other European countries. To encourage inclusiveness and diversity, the registration for organizers is open to all forms of government agencies, research centres, educational institutions, museums, foundations, community organizations, associations, businesses and NGOs, as well as individual citizens, etc. The central criterion for eligibility to take part in the ESDW is that the proposed project / initiative addresses one or more dimensions of sustainable development and is not exclusively profit-oriented. This could include, but is not limited to: conferences, exhibitions, markets, film screenings, community activities, sustainable business initiatives and education projects.
